Our objectives for the day:

- 1) Support partners to leverage and communicate data more effectively
- 2) Build skills and gain tools in choosing and framing data to build understanding of complex social issues connected to children and families.
- 3) Hear from local experts on using data in evaluation, advocacy, and local community contexts.

today?

Breakout Session 1: Using Data in Fundraising & Evaluation Efforts

Teri Haymond, Family Resource Center Association (moderator)

Panelists: Raymael Blackwell, Community First Foundation

Cara Bradbury, Zoma Foundation

Sarah Hernandez, Office of Health Equity at Colorado Department of Public Health & Environment

Objectives:

- Participants consider “upstream” ways to approach data in evaluation and funding efforts.
- Participants hear from Colorado funders about what types of data they look for, and how organizations can more effectively capture and report data to highlight impact.

Breakout Session 2: Leveraging Data for Policy Change

Hanna Nichols, The Civic Canopy (moderator)

Lisa Christie, Women’s Foundation of Colorado

Marina Mendoza, Denver Preschool Program

Kathleen Merritt, Bright Futures Early Childhood Council

Objectives:

- Participants are better equipped to widen the lens on data used in policy and advocacy contexts.
- Participants hear community experiences on leveraging data to improve policies impacting children and families.

Breakout Session 3: Accessing and Developing Data in Local Communities

Heather Hanna, Early Childhood Council Leadership Alliance (moderator)

Carsten Baumann, Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment

Kelsey Fife, Healthy Mesa County

Katy Lois, Grand Beginnings

- Participants discuss barriers to accessing data in local communities and opportunities to overcome them.
- Participants hear from data owners about ways to build partnerships and find ways to access better data.
