Community Learning Model

- Synthesis of research on effective teams and collaboratives
- Correlation between the quality of process and quality of population outcomes
- Provides a way to think about the ongoing work of creating collective impact through continuous improvement

The Collaboration Continuum

| Compete | Co-exist | Communicate | Cooperate | Coordinate | Collaborate | Integrate |
|---|--|---|---|--|---|---|
| Competition for clients, resources, partners, public attention. | No systematic connection between agencies. | Inter-agency information sharing (e.g. networking). | As needed, often informal, interaction, on discrete activities or projects. | Organizations systematically adjust and align work with each other for greater outcomes. | Longer term interaction based on shared mission, goals; shared decision-makers and resources. | Fully integrated programs, planning, funding. |

Results

What are we striving to achieve?

Results-Based Thinking

- It's always tempting to jump straight into action, doing what we think will work, but going immediately to action \neq results
- If we start with the end results and THEN focus on the means to get there, we're more likely to achieve our goals.

Results-Based Thinking

RESULT

The first question to ask is “what is the end result you seek?”

INDICATOR

The second question to ask is
“how would you know if you got there?”

Results-Based Thinking

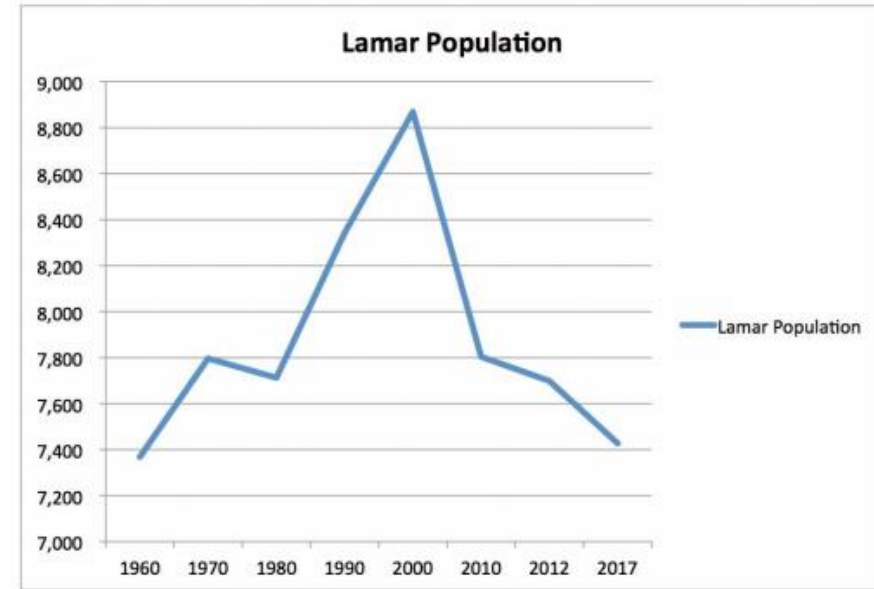

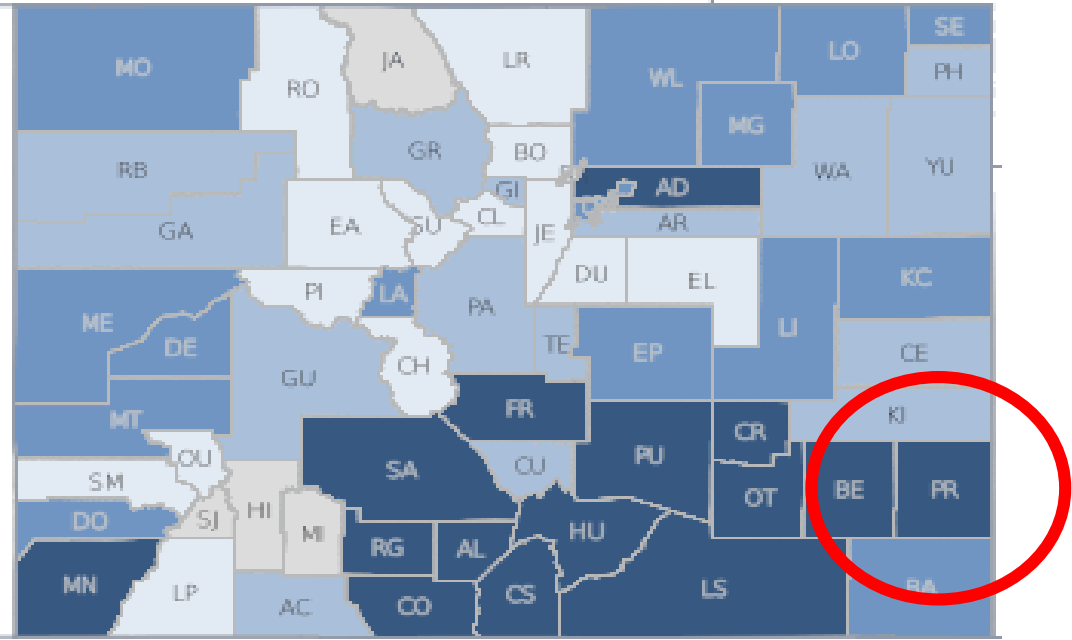

| Results | Indicators |
|---|--|
| Chaffee County's economy is diverse and resilient | Labor participation rates, income data, home ownership rates |
| All children reach their developmental potential and are ready to succeed in school and in life | % of children, Kindergarten – 3 rd grade, who have significant reading deficiency |
| Grand Junction is a safe and supportive community | Violent Crime Rates; Social Capital data |
| Colorado youth are connected to their community | % of 9 th -12 th grade students who report participating in any extracurricular activities in school |

Values: • Community • Collaboration • Inclusion • Respect • Communication • Excellence • Action • Determination

It is the pursuit of shared results
that brings people together,
rarely the offer of collaboration itself.

Reflecting On Your Results

- How does your collaborative group talk about the goals/outcomes/results that you seek? Write out the phrases, statements.
- How well does your language point people to the ultimate end result that you seek? Does it clearly articulate an elevating goal that describes the impact it would have on children, youth, families, communities, the environment, etc.? Or does it leave people asking “to what end?”

Shared Results Can...

- Encourage diverse and unlikely partners to work together
- Help partners see themselves as important contributors with a role toward achieving the end goal
- Create champions and collaborators instead of critics and competitors
- Keep partners motivated to stay at the table because their attention is on the end goal

Inclusion and Dialogue

Inclusive environments fostering shared commitment

The Power of Inclusion

- Increases creativity
- Increases support for solutions
- Provides legitimacy for interventions

And. . .

- Increases likelihood of conflict
- Increases complexity of process

Paradigm Shifts in Engagement

Levels of Involvement

Acknowledge Power Dynamics

The Bases of Social Power

Positional Power: Title or rank

Expert Power: Based on skills & knowledge

Referent Power: Reciprocity & mutual respect

Reward Power: Ability to give or take away rewards

Coercive Power: Ability to punish

Informational: Control over information others need

Case Study: East5side Unified

Process

- Leadership Team intentionally included more than 50% context power (those with deep connections to the community, lived experience)
- Learning process included bringing content experts to the table for shared learning

Case Study: East5ide Unified

Challenges

- Power dynamics aren't something you address once. It's a constant process.
- Ensuring processes are inclusive so voices are not only heard, but are comfortable coming to and staying at the table.

The Takeaway: Value the Process

- Rethinking ways of doing “business.”
- Be willing to put in the time to create conditions for engagement.
- Make the rules of the game clear from the outset.

What has inclusion looked like for you?

Consider a time you felt included in a process in a really authentic way.

What did you experience? See? Feel?

A pig is standing in a muddy path in a rural setting. The pig is the central focus, standing on a path that is partially covered in mud. The background shows a wooden fence and some foliage. The overall scene is somewhat blurry, suggesting a candid or documentary-style photograph. The text is overlaid on the image, centered horizontally and vertically.

Learn

The big deal about data-driven decision making

Data-Driven Decision Making Made Simple

1. Establish clear results—begin with the end in mind
2. Define how you will measure results—from X to Y by When
3. Include key partners in defining strategies that will work
4. Get the story behind the data—what would work to improve the situation?
5. Try something
6. Learn from what you tried—what worked? What didn't? What can you try next time?
7. Repeat.
8. Make it part of your culture.

Continuous Improvement, By Any Name

Expectation: See What Sticks, Fail Forward

- Continuously acknowledge the complex nature of the work
- Be willing to experiment! See failure is a valuable learning experience
- Failure as a key ingredient to continuous improvement
- Making this part of group norms and values

The Takeaway: Simple can contribute to a clearer picture

- Quick evaluations at the end of every meeting
- Checking in with members in small group/1-1 formats
- Tracking using data dashboards

Culture of Collaboration: A Way of Being

Activity: Where Are You Stuck?

Reflect for a moment: Where do you feel most “stuck” in your collaborative work?

- Look around the room and notice flip charts with each of the 5 elements of the Community Learning Model on the top of each paper.
- Head to the flip chart that corresponds with where you are the most stuck.

Activity: Where Are You Stuck?

What might be causing you to be stuck in this place?

Are you seeing any ways you might become “unstuck?”

- Discuss for a few minutes with others. Record your thoughts on your flip chart with writing or drawings.

Activity: Gallery Walk

Grab a marker and take a few minutes to walk around the room.

- Share your experiences, ideas, advice, and observations connected to each element.
- When you've seen this done well, what conditions are in place? What happened? Is there a specific tool or activity you'd recommend to others?
